World Agricultural Supply and Demand Estimates

The global wheat outlook for 2021/22 is for reduced supplies, fractionally lower consumption, increased trade, and lower ending stocks. Supplies are projected to decline 5.3 million tons to 1,082.6 million on reduced beginning stocks in several countries and lower U.S. production not offsetting higher foreign production. Global production is lowered 2.0 million tons to 792.4 million but still remains at a record.
